What is Digital Literacy?

UNICEF defines digital literacy as “the knowledge, skills and attitudes that allow children to flourish and thrive in an increasingly global digital world, being both safe and empowered, in ways that are appropriate to their age and local cultures and contexts.”

Through the lens of education, we like to think of digital literacy as a student’s ability to use digital tools and technologies to work, learn and interact. Digital literacy manifests as both a cognitive and technical skill.

Why is Digital Literacy Important?

Digital literacy is important for a number of reasons:

1. Digital literacy can improve online learning,
2. Digital literacy will help students discern online misinformation and
3. Digital literacy gives them access to a wide variety of online resources.

Most importantly, children are more exposed to the digital world than older generations.

UNICEF reports that 70% of 15–24-year-olds are on the internet, so they are developing digital skills all on their own. This leaves room for them to develop poor digital literacy, unless there is purposeful instruction in their training.

Since 2008, We Have Trained and Certified over 3,500 Master Trainers and Over 2,500 Organizations Staff Nationwide and Worldwide
